PRESSURE ATTEMPT BY GERMAN CONSUL IN N. Y. REVEALED

Ordered Greek Ship Captains
To Place Craft at Puppet
Government's Disposal

FROM RELIABLE SOURCE

Officers Refused, and Notified
Greek and American Authorities

By Kingsbury Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Unimpeachable sources today revealed that the German Consul General in New York, Johannes Borchers, attempted less than a fortnight ago to exert pressure on the captains of Greek ships in American ports.

Borchers sent messages to the Greek captains ordering them to place their ships at the disposal of the puppet Greek government established in Athens after the German occupation of Greece. He said he was acting on behalf of the German-controlled Athens government in transmitting the orders.

The Greek captains refused to obey Borchers' orders and notified the proper Greek and American authorities in this country of the matter.

Disclosure that the German Consul General had sent these orders to the Greek captains was one of the chief factors which prompted President Roosevelt to order the expulsion of all Nazi Consuls and propaganda agents from the United States.

In view of the fact that most of the Greek ships are engaged in carrying American supplies to the British and Allied forces in Europe, the American Government considered Borchers' action constituted both an improper and subversive activity.

Irrespective of whether the orders actually were issued by the German-controlled Athens government, American officials regard them as having been inspired by Berlin.

If the Greek captains had accepted the orders transmitted by Borchers, it is thought in official quarters in Washington that they might later have been instructed either to sabotage their ships or attempt to escape with them into an Axis port.

It was pointed out that if the Greek captains had not been loyal to the democratic cause, they might have sailed from American ports with cargo loads of vital war supplies and, once at sea, headed for an Axis-controlled port in Europe.

Germany's action in seeking indirectly to get control of the Greek ships in American waters recalled a similar move by the Italian Government in connection with Yugoslavian vessels in this country's ports.

Early last May, Rome sent wireless messages to the captains of 17 Yugoslavian ships in American waters ordering them to sail immediately for "friendly" South American ports and report to the Italian Consuls there.

The Yugoslavian captains ignored

Air-Waves Flooded With Nazi-Soviet War Reports

London, June 19.—The air waves of Europe were flooded today with a bedlam of rumor and report purporting to show that Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia are at war.

For propaganda purposes, or possibly from sheer hysteria, broadcasts in various capitals of Europe poured into London a series of sensational and spectacular reports which British newspapers splashed under banner headlines.

But neither from Berlin or Moscow came the slightest hint that anything but friendly relations still prevailed.

However, in an English-language broadcast, the Moscow radio assailed Turkey for signing what the announcer termed a "so-called friendship treaty" with Germany. This pact, it was said, completes subjection of the Balkans "to an interest inimical to Socialism."

The British Press Association cast doubt upon the reports, but radio listeners were startled by a broadcast from the Tiflis station in Georgian Russia asserting that a "certain power" is attempting to reconquer the Bessarabian territory which the Soviet Union recently took from Romania by agreement with Germany.

Simultaneously came a dispatch from Stockholm which quoted travelers arriving at Helsinki from Russia as telling of intensive Soviet mobilization.

The railway line connecting Moscow and Leningrad, these travelers related, is blocked by troop trains. Coming on the heels of a treaty of non-aggression and "mutual interest" signed between Germany and Turkey at Ankara yesterday, the strange series of broadcasts served to raise British press and officialdom to a high pitch of excitement.

Seasoned observers recalled similar instances in the past when "planted" announcements were used for the simple purpose of beclouding an issue.

Consider Property-Drafting Bill

WASHINGTON, June 19.—With the Senate Military Affairs Committee strongly in favor of modifying the bill giving President Roosevelt authority to draft property for national defense, high officials of the War and Navy Departments and the OPM today were summoned before the committee for "specific opinions" on the far-reaching legislation.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

A resident of Philadelphia has purchased the 128-acre farm on Valley Road, Warwick Township, which has been owned for six years by Wharton Sinkler, Elkins Park. The new owner is William H. Doubler, and the purchase price is given as $3,800. Mr. Doubler owns part of the former Morris Messer farm, Warwick Township.

The property contains 68 acres of woodland and meadow land along the Nesquehanna Creek; and buildings include a stone and frame dairy barn; and three-car garage. The Colonial house stands under a group of large trees.

Two permits which will convert two Doylestown homes into apartments have been issued by Louis Moerman, Jr., clerk for Doylestown borough council.

Reuben K. Krout was granted a permit to build an addition to the present dwelling of Mrs. Alice W. Vaux, East Ashland street, and convert it into a two-family dwelling. The improvements and change will cost $2,000.

Sara A. Watson was granted a per-

Wycombe Man To Be Buried On Saturday

DOYLESTOWN, June 19.—The funeral of William H. Elliott, 74, of "Keystone Farm," Wycombe, who died in the Doylestown Emergency Hospital yesterday, will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the A. S. Worthington Funeral Home at Wycombe.

Elliott, a retired engineer of the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was active in the service for 48 years. He was the first person to register in Bucks county when the registration of voters started several years ago. After retiring from railroad service Mr. Elliott became interested in farming and purchased a fine herd of cattle and located on a farm in the Newtown section.

Although he never held public office Mr. Elliott took a keen interest in the affairs of the Republican party and his home community. He was a past president of Linghocken Fire Company of Wycombe and active in Masonic circles.

The survivors include two sons, Robert H. Elliott, Wycombe, and William W. Elliott, Lambertville, N. J.

PRESBYTERIAN CHOIR IS FETED BY CONGREGATION

Delightful Affair Sponsored By
Board of Trustees Attended
By Forty-Six

GIFT TO CHORISTER

Members of the choir of Bristol Presbyterian Church were feted by the congregation last evening, when the annual dinner sponsored by the board of trustees was served at the Old York Road Country Club. Covers were arranged for 46 at this delightful affair.

The participants were inclusive of: Dr. and Mrs. Frank Lehman, Dr. and Mrs. John J. Hargrave, Mr. and Mrs. Charles I. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parr, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hermann, Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Weagley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weik, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. Forster; the Misses Betty Beswick, Virginia Vetter, Jane Lynch, Harriet and Jean Stetson, Olive Whyatt, Marian Smith; Mrs. Helen Stout, Mrs. Edward Fleming, Mrs. Ada Sands, Mrs. James Gailey, Mrs. V. ## LOCAL DEFENSE COUNCIL TO ESTABLISH OFFICES

Will Open Headquarters Soon
at 18 East Court Street,
Doylestown

WILL MEET TOMORROW

Headquarters of the Local Defense Council of Bucks County will shortly be established at 18 East Court street, Doylestown, it was announced yesterday. The Council's permanent office has been made available through the co-operation of Judge Keller.

The next meeting of the Defense Council will be held at 8 p. m., d. s. t., Friday, June 20, 1941, in the Auditorium of the Administration Annex in Doylestown, and due to arrangements made by the County Commissioners, future Defense Council meetings will take place there. Announcement will be made in the press of future meetings, in addition to the members of the Defense Council and its Advisory Board, all citizens of the county will be welcome.

A Finance Committee of the Defense Council has been appointed, to make arrangements for the financing of the overhead expenses of the Council during the period until provision for the expenses of this body can be made by the County Commissioners out of county funds. The budget for the county had been completed for the current year prior to the passage of the Act of the Legislature establishing the State and Local Defense Councils, and the appointment of the Bucks County Council by the County Commissioners. Consequently it will be necessary for the Finance Committee to raise money for the routine running expenses of the Council for the present by private subscription.

The Finance Committee, of which Mr. Thomas Ross of Doylestown is chairman, and Mrs. Dorsey Richardson, of Upper Makefield, is vice-chairman, is widely distributed in membership, as listed below. Mr. J. Purdy Weiss, Doylestown, the treasurer, will receive and disburse the funds of the Council. While no general campaign for funds is to be made, any member of the Finance Committee will be glad to receive contributions from those citizens who wish to assist in the temporary support of the essential work for which the Defense Council has been made responsible. The members of the finance committee are:

Mr. Thomas Ross, chairman, Doylestown; Mrs. Dorsey Richardson, vice-chairman, Upper Makefield; Mr. Thomas Scott, Bristol; Mr. William Burgess, Jr., Morrisville; Dr. Raymond A. Acuff, Langhorne; Mr. Edward R. Barnsley, Newtown; Mrs. Henry Chapin, New Hope; Mr. Guy R. Leedom, Southampton; Mr. Oscar O. Bean, Doylestown; Mrs. Samuel L. Althous, Sellersville; Mr. W. Elmer Savacool, Perkasie; Mr. Samuel F. Cressman, Quakertown; Mr. William L. Leattor, Riegelsville.

TOT OF 4 ACCIDENTALLY SHOT IN FINGER, ARM

Dorothy Ann Cotshott, Fergusonville, Has Tip of Finger Amputated

FOUND RIFLE IN ATTIC

A four-year-old girl narrowly escaped death yesterday afternoon when she was struck in the finger and arm with a bullet from a .22 rifle found in an attic.

The child, Dorothy Ann Cotshott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cotshott, Ritter avenue, Fergusonville, was treated at the Harriman Hospital. The end of her left index finger was amputated, and the bullet was removed from her elbow.

Dorothy Ann, along with her cousin, John Cotshott, 4, and Edward Charlton, 6, and Joseph Charlton, 4, neighbors, were playing and decided to go to the Charlton house. The youngsters went into the attic and there found hidden under the eaves a .22 rifle. Mrs. Charlton told police that to the best of her knowledge the rifle was empty and she did not know of any bullets about the house.

The youngsters went outside and whether they found bullets or just how they did get them has not been determined. The youngsters appear not to be able to describe just what they did.

At the hospital it was stated that the bullet apparently went through the tip of the index finger, through the palm of the hand and entered the arm at the elbow. The child's second finger was also contused.

His Personal Fight

Washington, June 18.

THE next big Senate fight will be over the St. Lawrence waterways proposal, put forward by the President. The hearings are scheduled to begin very shortly, and recent developments make it clear that Mr. Roosevelt intends to use his whole weight to jam through this immensely costly and exceedingly dubious proposal.

THIS will be discouraging news to many who feel that nothing should be permitted to interfere with the production of war and defense supplies and that this project very definitely would do so. However, it will not surprise those who know the extraordinary tenacity with which

Ask Permit To Build Wharf at Cornwells Heights

The Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Co. has applied for War Department approval of revised plans to construct a wharf, two dolphins and a stone dike and to dredge in Delaware River at Cornwells Heights in Bensalem Township.

Permit for the construction of a wharf and dredging was issued April 9, 1941. The revised plans provide for constructing a steel sheet pile, concrete faced wharf, 150 feet long and 35 feet wide, instead of 200 feet long and 30 feet wide, parallel to and 150 feet shoreward from the northwesterly edge of the channel along Enterprise Range, a mooring pile dolphin 150 feet on each side of the wharf inshore from a line along the channelward edge of the wharf and a stone dike between the inner end of wharf and the mean high water line, and for dredging an area to a depth of 25 feet below mean low water in front of the proposed wharf.

The decision as to whether or not the revised plans will be approved will depend upon the effect of the proposed work on navigation. Any criticism or protest regarding the plans from the standpoint of navigation should be submitted to H. B. Vaughan, Jr., Lieut. Colonel, Corps of Engineers, District Engineer.

TRANSPORT "BUNDLES" TO OFFICE AT NEWTOWN

Method To Be Followed Until
New Headquarters Are Secured
For British Aid

PLAN CARD BENEFIT

Due to the fact that temporary headquarters of Bristol Unit of Bundles for Britain at 122 Mill street has been rented, and no other quarters are available at the present time, the committee has decided to call for bundles and deliver the same to chapter headquarters in Newtown, during the Summer months.

Hundreds of garments have been collected, mended and sent to Newtown from the Bristol unit, and the sale of pins and other articles has been most satisfactory.

The social activities of the Bundles for Britain unit, to raise funds, will continue, and the next card party will be held at the residence of Mrs. Howard R. Foelt, 1st and Landreth avenues, Edgely. The public is invited to this affair which will take place on Wednesday, June 25th, at two p. m. In case of rain, a new date will be set by the unit. There will be a number of prizes, and refreshments will be served.

Langhorne Drum Corps To Enter Two Parades, July 4th

LANGHORNE, June 19.—The Defense and Independence Day parade at Glenside is to be participated in by members of the Junior Drum and Bugle Corps of Jesse W. Soby Post, American Legion, on July 4th.

The hour is six p. m.; and on the same day at 10 a. m., the local musical unit will join in a parade at Southampton.

The Corps will be drilled in marching during the next three weeks with the hope of bringing home a prize from Glenside. Nine awards will be given to corps making the best appearance in marching, music and cadence. About 30 corps are expected in the line of march. A huge fireworks display will end the celebration.

THREE MEN HURT IN CAVE-IN AT A BRIDGE PROJECT

Maurice Kelly, Swain Street;
Harry Vandegrift, Croydon;
Trevoze Man Injured

TWO STILL IN HOSPITAL

Shoring Said To Have Given
Way; Accident in Lower
Bensalem Township

A trio of men employed on the construction of a bridge in Bensalem Township, were partially buried under earth and debris when shoring is said to have given way on the project yesterday morning. Two remain in the hospital.

The injured: Maurice Kelly, aged 58, of 623 Swain street, broken left leg, broken finger, injury to spinal column, brush burns and bruises of the body.

Harry Vandegrift, aged 58, of Sycamore avenue, Croydon, cut on the temple, brush burns of the thigh.

Theodore Albert, of Trevoze, concussion of the brain, fracture of shoulder blade, and fracture of a small bone in the foot.

The accident occurred where a small bridge with stone masonry abutments is being built over a tributary of Nesquehanna Creek, the bridge carrying a thoroughfare over the stream. The bridge is located between Poquessing Creek and Hulmeville Road, on county route 09125.

When the cracking of timbers and rumble of earth was first heard, Vandegrift, by trade a dock builder, realized that something was giving way, and ran. He was able to escape the main fall of debris and soil, but either fell or was caught in part of it. Consequently he was but slightly hurt. Following treatment at Abington Hospital, where the trio was taken, Vandegrift returned to his home yesterday, and was able to go back on the job this morning.

Kelly and Albert remain in the hospital, their injuries being much more severe.

The bridge is a WPA project, with approximately nine or ten men engaged on the actual construction of the bridge, it is said.

Kelly was engaged to aid in mixing of cement. He had been on this particular project but four days, having been transferred from another job.

AUTOS INDISPENSABLE

Great Britain's experience with the automobile as a civilian factor in defense is being surveyed by American authorities with a view to arriving at a sound policy. When the war broke out in September, 1939, the British government ordered the impounding of thousands of passenger cars on the ground that they were consuming gasoline and oil needed for defense and that there was no service to which they could be put that would justify their use.

But these cars have recently been released by the thousands. Britain had 77,000 more private cars in use the first of this year than on January 1, 1940. The reversal of policy came with the realization that during the last twenty years many industrial centers had reconstructed their transportation systems around the private automobile. They did not have public transportation facilities to handle defense workers.

The British Isles have one motor vehicle for every 19 persons. The United States has one for every four persons. The figures tell the story of America's dependence on passenger car transportation in comparison with Britain's. In some American areas it is found that as many as 70 per cent of the employees of defense industries are dependent on automobiles for rides to and from work. The American problem is to provide this transportation as an essential of maximum defense industry output. It may call for modification of orders limiting the production of new cars and automobile equipment.

BOYS LOSE A FRIEND

American boys have lost a great and good friend in the death of Daniel Carter Beard, one of the founders and leaders of the Boy Scouts, whose career of great usefulness has been ended at the age of 91.

"Uncle Dan" Beard was a builder of good citizens. Acting on the sound theory that as the twig is bent so the tree will be inclined, he and the others associated with him in the Scout movement for more than a quarter of a century have devoted their abilities and their interest to the molding of youthful lives during formative years.

Dan Beard and Sir Robert Baden-Powell have brought to the youth of the world benefits of incalculable value. Through practical means which have provided a maximum of enjoyment they have taught to millions the lessons of clean living, patriotism and devotion to high ideals. The benefits of these lessons have been retained through life, contributing to the nation's priceless asset of good citizenry.

When boys are imbued with a love of nature, interest in wild life and are taught to follow the practice of good conduct and the principles of religious faith there is every certainty that they will grow to admirable manhood. Dan Beard, through his personal efforts and the organization of which he was an interested and effective leader to the time of his death, helped immeasurably to produce good boys and good men.

His work will be carried on by others, equally interested in boys but the living presence of this venerable man with his eternally youthful spirit will be missed by the cause which was so close to his heart.

Something new under the sun is a parity wheat price that is both floor and ceiling.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Tony stared after him. This was queer — very, very queer. He thought it over as he joined Eric Thelme in the dining saloon. They sat opposite each other at the end of the long table which, even with its crystal and silver, seemed cheerless. Fritz served a cream soup and departed. Beneath the bright light in the saloon, Eric's face looked mottled, criss-crossed with purple veins, baggy under the eyes.

"How do you feel about getting to Cannes? I suppose you'll take a fling at the tables?" Tony, still thoughtful, glanced at the big fellow who was engrossed in his food.

"Yes—rather," Eric brightened at the appearance of a porterhouse steak. "Now this is something!" he remarked. "I never did go for French sauces at all."

His English accent slipped. Tony studied him curiously. "You've probably tasted the food of all countries," he said. "Something of a traveler, aren't you? Of course, you've been to the States?"

Thelme grew a shade redder, helping himself again to the Irish whiskey at his elbow. "The States!—Ah, quite—Yes, of course, I've knuckled about everywhere. Did my bit in the war — that was before your time. Matter of fact—" He turned faintly bloodshot eyes on Tony. "I'm an army man. Give me a jolly good fight and I'm for it."

"I don't mind a real scrap myself, now and then," Tony agreed. "But I hope I never have to climb into a uniform. You're a major, aren't you? What regiment were you in?"

"Princess Pat's," Eric turned away for another helping of beefsteak. He couldn't bear just then to meet Tony's gray eyes. He'd been in the war, all right. And he had done his bit, but he was with the A. E. F., and not a major. And in Paris, after the Armistice, there had been a little matter of raising a check—Felix Northern knew about that. Eric changed the subject.

"I visited your Palm Beach one winter. Topping place," he said in a hearty manner. He had left Palm Beach rather hurriedly, following an unfortunate game of cards. Northern knew about that, too.

Tony smiled. "I can see you're a man of the world, as well as a man of action."

"You really think so?" Eric was pleased. He liked young Worth — this Yank was top-hole!

Tony bent suddenly forward. He had been leading up to this. "Look here, Thelme, it's none of my business, of course; but you seem to be pretty thick with Northern. I don't get it." Tony's voice was blunt. "It's not your sort."

The purple veins stood out on Eric's cheeks. "To tell you the truth, old fellow," he burst out, "I —" and he stopped short.

Hioto had come into the room like a shadow. His nimble figure demure in black kimono, rimmed glasses, scholarly on his small nose. He stood grinning and bowing before the two men, but it was to Eric he addressed himself. "Excusing please. Mr. Northern hoping to see you when convenient." He gave Tony a bland glance and was gone.

The effect of the Japanese on the "Major" was like a needle pricking a balloon. The big fellow seemed to collapse. There was nothing more to be got out of him. He took a large swallow of whisky and mumbled, "You ought to see that little blighter wrestle! I'd hate to have him after me! I saw him break a chap's wrist once—bushy chap, too. It was as quick as this—" Eric snapped a twisted cheese stick to him.

Tony nodded, his face grave. "Jiu Jitsu. A friend of mine—Chet Weil, taught me a few tricks. I used to be pretty good at it."

"Mighty useful thing to know," But Eric's mood of confidence was ended. He became fidgety and distracted over his coffee and cigar. Tony didn't try to pull the conversation around again. He had worries enough of his own.

While Tony had been drawing Eric out, he had thought of Hans, the seaman. Very possible that Hans knew something, for which he wanted money. Possible, also, that he had chosen for a rendezvous the dark, haunted spot of tragedy on the boat deck because they would be least likely to be interrupted there.

Eric made off with a sheepish, "If you don't mind, ol' fellow, I'll toddle along."

Tony went below, his eyes sharp on the way. He saw no one. He entered his room, clicking the switch at the door, his gaze directed toward the table. He almost expected to find more white carnations, but there was nothing.

He went to his bag which he had purposely left half-packed, and hunted under its jumbled contents for the .32 he had placed there in Corfu. It was gone, of course. He might have known it would be gone. Anyway, shooting was one of the things he wanted to avoid, with Marie on board.

As Tony straightened from his bag, a faint knock sounded. To his "Come in," Marie entered, but not entirely, for she leaned against the side of the door, holding it half open.

Tony's pulse jumped. He started toward her, but she put up her hand. "I'm not staying," she said, her eyes unsmiling. "I heard you come down, so that's why — I mean I wanted to tell you that I've been thinking a lot. I've decided to go home as soon as the Serenita is overhauled for an ocean voyage. She's cruised often. Perhaps you'll be glad to hear this. It probably doesn't matter one way or another."

"My dear—" Tony's face constricted. "You misunderstood me. I can't explain. I—"

"You needn't," she said coldly. "It doesn't interest me."

"Maybe this will, then," he snapped. "Your guardian did send me over to look after you. And I'm going to. You're not to leave the yacht tomorrow until I take you on shore. And if you hadn't broken that fool engagement, I'd have dragged you away if I had to tie and gag you to do it. I was only waiting for Cannes, because I didn't want to start anything before—"

They glared at each other, as they had done on the quay at Corfu. But when she spoke, she had gained control of herself and only her fingers tightening on the black chiffon betrayed defiance. "You're very considerate, but too confident."

She raised her stubborn chin. "I shan't go on shore with you tomorrow, though. And I'm luncheon with Nino at the Ambassadeurs." Her lip quivered as she was going away. "Marie!" Tony cried.

She turned back. He saw with dismay that her eyes were aflame. "I oughtn't ever to speak to you again, Mr. Worth." She looked at him as he stood rigid, holding himself in. She added slowly, "But perhaps—We'll see in the morning." The door closed on her.

The appointed spot, where Tony waited at the stroke of eight bells, was pitch black. Minutes slid by, with only the sound of water slapping against the Serenita's plates. The Captain's quarters, forward, seemed far away. Tony felt restless, impatient and disappointed.

The launch, shrouded, gleamed pale between the davits. How could any sane person believe that Ray had tried to climb into it?

His nerves warned him too late. Behind him, a wiry arm shot like a bolt under his left arm and across the nape of his neck. Fingers pressed cruelly at a sensitive point under his right ear. "Pain shot through his every nerve and fibre.

Tony bent his knees. He whirled low to the left, as the Jap's legs sought grip around his waist. His right hand folded on the terrible fingers. His thumb pushed against Hioto's thumb. Hioto twisted, melted back into shadows. All this in less than thirty seconds!

Tony put a hand to his forehead. It was clammy wet. He stepped back, feeling sick. Why had Hioto, an expert at Jiu Jitsu, let him go? The Serenita seemed to shiver as she rose on a long wave. The silence was washed by the rippling of sea.

It was so clear now, what had happened to Ray Sheldon last night. Tony could see it. High-pitched with excitement, unable to sleep, with liquor lacing his nerves, Ray must have decided to have it out with either Fritz or the Japanese. In that keyed-up state, it didn't matter to Ray what time of night it was. Tony could imagine Ray's small, agile figure, battling mad, fermenting around in the dark.

Then Hioto, on the prow, must have come upon him. Soon the paralyzing grip had shot out of space, swift as a snake strikes. A twist, the crack of a bone, and numbed, unconscious, perhaps already dead, Ray's body had been carried to that deserted place on the boat deck. Why on the boat deck? Because they could plant the clues, the piece of shirt at the davit of the launch, the trace of his rubber soles on the rail, before he was heaved over the side.

Tony took a few uncertain steps toward Captain Buckner's quarters. Dim lights glimmered forward on the overwakened bridge. That was why, of course, Hioto hadn't returned to his deadly attack which depended on surprise. He couldn't afford noise. . . . But he knows what I know, Tony thought. . . . That meant they would do everything in their power to prevent him from leaving the yacht in the morning, when the Serenita hoisted anchor in Cannes harbor.

"If I tell Captain Buckner, he'll have Hioto put in irons," Tony told himself, shaking his head. It wouldn't do. In a showdown North-borne would have the advantage. He owned the crew. Tony didn't doubt now that Hans had obeyed orders to lure him up here. It would be senseless to risk mutiny in the small hours before dawn. And what would prevent them from speeding to some other port, with Marie as hostage?

Worth went slowly down the stairs to the main deck. His hand shook as he lit a cigarette. He could no longer plan to see Marie safely to shore. Yet he dared not trust her alone. The seemingly innocent lunch in Cannes with Nino Lippi might so easily be a trap.

Eve Pryne was the only answer. Tony dashed below, stopping short in the corridor before her state-room. How could he crash in there at this hour?

A rattle of china drew him around. Mrs. Crowder, the stewardess, ballooned in view, carrying a tray. Her pursed mouth loosened when she spied Tony. On the tray was a cup of cocoa and a plate of small assorted sandwiches.

"You're up late, Mrs. Crowder," Tony observed, with sudden hope in his smile. "It's past one o'clock."

"It's for her," Mrs. Crowder sniffed, jerking her white-capped head toward Eve's door. "Not even that sleeping stuff she took has kept her quiet. She says eating's the only thing that helps her when her nerves are upset."

"I am feeling a bit hungry, myself," Tony said boldly. "If Mrs. Pryne's awake, I wonder if she'd mind my sharing her snack?"

"I'll ask her," Mrs. Crowder had a soft spot for good looking young men. She waddled through the door, and returned beaming. "Go right in, Mr. Worth. And tell her she needn't ring again. I won't answer."

Summer No Time To Neglect Food

Satisfying and well-balanced meals are just as important during hot weather as in any other season. Adults use as much energy in their daily tasks and children play as hard and grow as fast in summer as in winter. Food supplies the fuel and the building material and we must have it in sufficient quantity and quality.

The homemaker's problem is complicated by the fact that appetites at this time of year are apt to go on a strike, and also that the task of cooking may become irksome.

For food which is a dainty and appetizing and yet substantial enough to "stick to the ribs" there's nothing superior to meat salads. These attractive main dishes are always popular for party fare and they are just as suitable for a family meal.

They are not hard to prepare. The cook's task is made easier when a larger amount of meat is cooked at one time with the intention of using a portion of it later in a salad. Or, if the meat is cooked especially for this purpose, it can be cooked early in the day or at any convenient time.

The meat is then cut into cubes, ready to combine with the other ingredients. To enhance its flavor, it may be marinated in a mixture of oil and vinegar or a prepared French dressing.

A salad which contains a generous proportion of meat with vegetables or fruit will provide many food essentials. For the hot dish on the menu a cream soup is fine; or a hot vegetable may be served in the casserole in which it is baked.

Here are two unusually delicious meat salads, suggested by Inez S. Willson, home economist. They are special enough for company fare, and easy enough for any family meal.

Lamb and Pineapple Salad
2 cups diced cold lamb
1 cup pineapple, diced
2 sprigs chives, diced
1/2 cup whipped cream
1 tablespoon Roquefort cheese, finely chopped
French dressing
Paprika
Romaine
Mayonnaise dressing
Salt and pepper

Marinate cold diced lamb with French dressing. Drain and combine with pineapples, chives and seasoning. Chill and just before serving mix with mayonnaise which has been thinned with whipped cream and flavored with Roquefort cheese. Toss until well mixed, then heap on crisp romaine or lettuce leaves. Arrange pineapple slices around it and decorate with radish roses.

Pork Apple Salad
2 cups diced cooked pork
1 cup diced celery
1 1/2 cups diced apple
1 1/2 cups grated cheese
1 green pepper, shredded
Mayonnaise
Mix well and toss into enough mayonnaise to coat well.

Dude Ranch Supper At Home

Even if your particular summer-on-a-ranch takes place in your own backyard, you'll enjoy giving a dude ranch supper party and hailing in your neighborhood friends with hearty Western hospitality. For decorations use the tiny cactuses you can get for a few cents. And, if possible, have gay plaid table cloths. Barbecued meat—beef or veal—is a cowboy special that's easy to cook for a crowd. A big dish of vegetable chowder is another favorite with the boys who roam the cow ranges. Serve Ranchers' Cofolate made with decaffeinated coffee. This novel Mexican style thirst quencher will give the party a vacation flavor, and you can encourage everyone to drink extra cups without considering sleeping problems. Suggest that your guests come in whatever version of Wild West regalia they can manage, even if they have to borrow Junior's ten gallon cowboy hat.

Ranchers' Cofolate
4 tablespoons decaffeinated coffee, regular or drip grind
6 cloves
1 four-inch piece stick cinnamon
Dash of salt
4 cups milk
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
3/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 egg, well beaten
Add coffee, cloves, cinnamon, and salt to milk, and heat in double boiler until milk is scalded. Strain and return to double boiler. Add chocolate and heat until chocolate is melted. Beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Combine sugar and flour; add gradually to chocolate mixture and cook until thickened, stirring occasionally. Cool slightly; pour over egg and blend. Chill. Pour over cracked ice in tall glasses. Top with whipped cream, if desired. Make 1 quart coffee.

Vegetable Chowder
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 cup peas
1 cup diced carrots
1 cup water
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup canned corn
2 1/2 cups milk
Melt butter in saucepan; add onion and pepper and cook 10 minutes, stirring frequently; then add peas, carrots and water, and cook slowly 20 to 30 minutes, or until vegetables are tender. Combine with quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, salt, corn and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 10 to 12 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Serves 6 to 8.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

"My dear boy, this is nice! I haven't talked to a soul all day," Mrs. Pryne's blond head and pale blue wrap were effective in the light of a rose lampshade. "It's been too awful!" she went on, motioning him to sit beside her bed. "Marie has shut herself in, and I've just lain here, thinking of horrors." She passed the plate of sandwiches, and took one herself.

Tony broke into her chatter. "Can I trust you, Eve?" he began abruptly.

"Trust me? Why, of course." Her eyebrow shot up, and she regarded him from her pillows, with arch friendliness.

He leaned forward, holding her eyes with his. "All right. Then you mustn't let Marie out of your sight tomorrow. I don't know what time Captain Buckner expects to make Cannes, but it should be fairly early. Get her on shore, and keep her there until you hear from me."

Eve looked bewildered. "What a funny thing to ask! You know how Marie is," she murmured plaintively. "She always—"

"Has her own way," Tony filled in, with impatience. "Well, for one thing, she wants to lunch with Lippi. If she does, insist on joining them. Then suggest shopping, baccarat, visiting friends—anything. Better stay around the Croisette, where there are plenty of people."

"But I simply don't understand," Eve cried. "I mean, after all, Marie's engaged to the Marchese Lippi, and I—?" Her doll-blue eyes widened in perplexed interrogation.

"She broke her engagement today. Please don't start on questions. They were crowded so fast to her open mouth, that not one had popped out. And she nearly upset her cup of cocoa."

"Look, Eve, skip the fluff, and be yourself; because Marie needs a friend more than she ever did before—but she doesn't know it." He spoke with such deadly earnestness that Eve's hands, fluttering on the coverlet, grew very still as she stared at him.

"Here's the thing," he went on, quickly, "Marie's coming into a lot more money in a very short time. Lippi's playing on her sympathies, now that she's thrown him over. He may try to rush her into something—understand?"

"I thought he was after her money," Eve cried. "I could have told her so. But there's no use telling Marie anything. She's—"

Tony took looking down at her almost in despair. Her mind skipped along like a brook, bright and shallow over stones, yet there must be quieter depths at some point. "You can help now," he said, in a gentler tone. "Not by talking to her, but by giving her no chance. He might even set Northheim on her—arguments, appeals and so forth. But if you're around, they can't really do anything. And since the cruise ends at Cannes—" He left the rest to her imagination.

"I see what you mean! They won't be on the yacht any more." Eve sounded triumphant, as if she had reasoned it out for herself. "But I don't see," she continued, leaning back on her pillows. "Why Marie can't come back on her own ship whenever she wants to."

Tony was prepared for that. He said, impressively, "Because we're going to investigate Ray's accident, and it would only distress her."

"Oh!" Eve's eyes grew brighter. "Don't tell me there's anything queer about it! How ghastly!"

Tony rammed his hands into the pockets of his dinner coat. He would have liked to shake Mrs. Pryne. "I can't go into that to-night," he said harshly. "Can I depend on you or not?" The desperate appeal in his voice did more than any words.

"Yes, you can," Eve clasped her hands. "You really can, Tony." She sounded aroused and sincere.

"Thanks," Tony moved to the door, glanced back, and went out. But his heart was heavy as he went to his room, to sit up until dawn. Every creak seemed to be a footstep; every sigh, someone breathing at his door.

Eve Pryne got out of bed when Tony had gone. Her pulse galloped. She was tempted to wake Marie and tell her about Worth's amazing visit. The whole thing was quite clear now to Eve. Tony had fallen in love with Marie, and was simply torn apart with jealousy, poor dear....

"I must sleep. I really must," Eve mused. She opened the medicine chest, and took another sleeping tablet which, including the two previous ones, should certainly relax anyone's nerves.

Felix Northheim had been drinking vodka laced with pepper, ever since his solitary dinner. He had dined in the large room of his suite, but for once its mirrors and luxurious appointments hadn't brought ease. He hated to change his plans at the last moment, especially when it meant resort to extreme measures. Marie Schuyler and Anthony Worth were forcing him to those measures, and he hated both!

Promoter of profitable war though he might be, Northheim was absurdly squeamish when executions became necessary. Ray Sheldon last night, and Tony Worth tonight; it was too much. And such "accidents" might mean investigations. But he needn't worry about that, because tomorrow would settle everything.

He paced in and out of his office, pausing to stare at his cabinets which held material enough to line up so much American wealth. In a few hours, he would show enough of the stuff to Friedrich Hasmel and Sergei Vorodkin to convince them he held winning cards. And he had the Schuyler money as his trump. He wasn't boasting when he told Nino he could bring the little idiot to his knees.

It was long after midnight. The moments ticked away. Hoto should be here. The main door into the passage opened. The Marchese Lippi and Eric Thelme came in, for the last conference and orders before Cannes.

Lippi was shaky. He had spent unforgettable hours in his cabin, trying not to think. This was the first time Northheim had taken him so far into his confidence.

Eric flung himself down. He had drunk himself into a fog, after his talk at dinner with Tony. Something Tony had said burned like a hot light at the back of his head. He couldn't remember. But it had something to do with Northheim's men. "All rotters!" he muttered.

Northheim's gaze went beyond him to the door. Hoto fitted through it; stood motionless, his eyes pinpoints behind his glasses. He shook his head.

"You mean—he got away?" Northheim's voice was strangled.

Thelme fought to clear the mists from his mind. He lurched belligerently to his feet. "Who got away?"

Hoto's smile was a grimace. "Mr. Worth very wily man. Knows wrestling... the new Weil knee technique! Him get away from excellent attack. Any moment people might come. So, wisdom dictating. I humbly retire. Not missing him next time."

Thelme crashed out of his fog. "You murdering swine!" he belated. "You did for Sheldon, and tonight—Worth? I say, I'll get you for that."

"Keep quiet! Let me think." Northheim's voice was low, but it cut like a whip. He walked around the red lacquer table in the big room, and sat heavily down, tucking his short legs under the chair. He sat brooding, contemptuous of these white-livered men he had to trust.

Lippi gasped, "He saw you?" Hoto bowed. "Admirably."

Thelme's face was purple. "I'll be dashed if I stand for this slimy outfit any longer!" He made a lunge for the door.

Hoto flashed into action. The big man soon yelled, "You're breaking my arm! Stop!"

Hoto relaxed his grip, giggling. "Learn lesson?"

Northheim spoke calmly from the table. "That will do, Hoto. Major Thelme, or shall I say Lord Hurlingham, or do you prefer any of the other names illuminating your very cosmopolitan—records?" His thick lip curled. "Perhaps you'd feel much more at home as Yankee Eddy Johnson?"

The high color ebbed from Thelme's cheeks. He looked his fifty years. He sank back into the leather chair from which he had sprung.

"And you, Nino? Have you anything to say?" Felix stared at the handsome Marchese.

Nino shrugged, his face ashen. "Then here are my orders—" Northheim thrust his head forward. When he had finished, there wasn't a sound in the room.

Marie awakened early. The rhythmic beat of Diesels was stilled, and a golden light sifted through the white curtains drawn across the Serenade's portholes as she lay at anchor in Cannes harbor. Marie curled lazily under the sheet, letting warm, happy thoughts form pictures she could see with her eyes closed. It was nearly July. She'd be glad to go home; glad to see her guardians again. What a headache she had been to them, especially R. F.—dear old Judge Fairchild! Imagine sending Tony over here after her! She ought to be furious at them all, and she wasn't.

Then something not so pleasant stirred in her mind. She sat up in bed. It was going to be rather a difficult day. She wished now she hadn't promised to lunch with Nino Lippi, even if he had sent such a sad little note down to her cabin last night—all about loving her still, though she had been cruel to him, and wanting to be friends. She hoped both he and Northheim knew that their time was up on the yacht. Funny how you woke and felt simply swell until you remembered things. The thought of Ray Sheldon ached again. She had cabled his mother the shocking news.

Later, Hortense appeared with the breakfast tray and an air of bright mystery to announce: "I have a letter for Mademoiselle, which Monsieur le Capitaine Buckner gave me with the recommendation that I place it in Mademoiselle's personal hands." The Parisian love of intrigue sparked in the maid's eyes as she whisked a cream-colored envelope from the upper confines of her black silk stocking. "Mademoiselle will pardon the method of transport, but I understood it was of the utmost secrecy."

Marie tore the envelope open. "Why, it's from the Baroness Lascar!" she exclaimed. "How on earth did it come aboard?" But she didn't hear Hortense chatter, as she read the few lines which made her forget the flaky little croissants, the pale curls of butter, and the coffee growing cold on her tray.

Madame Lascar had written, "I must see you at once, about a mutual friend. Please tell me one, but come to my villa this morning." The address was the Villa Rose, Route de Frejus.

Hortense, bursting with curiosity, darted birdlike picking things up near the bed. "Monsieur le Capitaine had not a contented look," she prattled on. "He was red—red as a rose. He says to me that a boy brought this letter in a boat, and it appears this boy asked for the Capitaine, praying him with urgency to place it personally in Mademoiselle's hands. But the Capitaine calls me. Ah, he is of a sacred temper this morning!"

Marie's heart beat faster. What did the note mean? She had forgotten the Baroness. Now she remembered being fascinated by her at that one meeting in Corfu—her grace, her dress, her manners. But it was queer—her coming on the yacht that day and shutting herself up with Felix Northheim. Then Tony came to mind....

"I'm dressing in a hurry. My pink linen, Hortense—Oh, and you can have the day off," Marie jumped out of bed.

KNOWLEDGE OF THE TEXTILE TERMS WILL AID IN PURCHASING

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)

If a woman knows the meaning of the words on the fabrics and clothing she buys, she can make her own money go further, and she'll be helping her country too.

There is a tendency of some manufacturers to make adjustments in quality in order to maintain price levels. This gives those manufacturers who are eager to safeguard their reputation, an added incentive for putting informative labels on their goods. If the woman buyer learns what these labels mean, she will not accept the poorer quality merchandise that is being substituted.

True, definitions have not been agreed upon for all textile terms. But the trend is for standards—for names and terms that let women know what they are buying. Many such are in use. Women and clerks are learning to speak the same language.

Yarn count, sometimes called thread count, simply means the number of warp yarns (the lengthwise ones) per inch of fabric and the number of filling yarns (the crosswise ones) per inch of fabric. As usually written the warp count comes first. For example a heavy muslin sheet 74 by 66 means 74 warp yarns per inch and 66 filling yarns per inch. Sometimes if both counts are the same, the count is stated as square, for example, "80 square percale" means 80 yarns per inch in each direction. Knowing yarn count is important in judging quality. A higher count fabric has yarns closer together and, other things being equal, it will be stronger and more durable.

Manufacturers often fill the air space of low count fabrics with a mixture of starch and other materials. Such a mixture, called "filler," "sizing," or "loading," often washes out in the first or second laundering. It adds little to the actual value of the material, although it improves the appearance of the new cloth and gives it a feeling of greater "body."

Consumers need to know the meanings of the names of the different kinds of wool. "Reprocessed wool," means fiber made from wool that has been previously woven or felted into a wool product, but never used by a consumer. "Reused wool" is fiber made from wool or reprocessed wool which has been spun, woven, knitted or felted into a wool product and used by a consumer. New wool, of course, is not necessarily the best, for there are both good and inferior grades of new wool. Material containing rayon must be so labeled. The label must read "Rayon Satin," or "Rayon and Silk Satin," if such be the case. The fibers will be named in the order of their per cent by weight in the fabric, with the highest first.

On the shrinkage question—use of such terms as "Full Shrink," "Pre-shrunk," "Will Not Shrink" are prohibited unless the cotton fabric so labeled has no residual shrinkage. "Residual Shrinkage" simply means that the cloth will shrink more when laundered. Look for the labels that

FOOD MARKET

Advice-

TRUCK gardens throughout the country are beginning to make bountiful contributions to the home-maker's market basket this week and such items inseparably associated with summer as cherries, watermelons, plums, cucumbers and corn are appearing in the grocery stores in good quantity.

Other budget priced items among fresh foodstuffs over the week-end will be California oranges, beets, carrots, iceberg lettuce, Romaine, escarole, spinach, rhubarb, tomatoes, radishes and scallions.

California is beginning to ship its summer crop of apricots, and both blackberries and huckleberries are in market. The old potato season is ending and the deliciously flavored new potatoes are now available in abundance.

Beef Best Buy

Beef is the best meat buy, with the largest of the chains putting particular emphasis on ribs of beef, porterhouse, sirloin and chuck steaks and chuck pot roasts as low-priced cuts. Plate and navel beef and boneless brisket beef are good budget buys.

Smoked ham will be a featured item over the week-end and the frankfurters and cold cuts will help to keep the budget low.

Boston reports that arrivals of fresh halibut from the west coast will be plentiful this week, with low prices prevailing. A fair supply of fresh Western salmon is expected. The New York market has large supplies of butterfish, and sea bass, porgies, Bonita mackerel, croakers and whiting are also low priced. Baltimore reports a good supply of crabmeat.

Based on low priced items over the week-end, the following menu is suggested for Sunday dinner:

- Meat Loaf
- Baked Tomatoes
- Boiled Rice
- Creamed Carrots
- Bread and Butter
- Blackberry Dumplings
- Tea or Coffee

"AWAY FROM IT ALL"

Picture yourself this summer, and many summers, huddled up in this cozy little snugery on a quiet lake, while telephones jangle and traffic clatters . . . somewhere else.

It would be fun to build it yourself. After the foundation, which means only a few low-cost piers, such as concrete blocks, set in footings, the framing is hardly more than two days' work for a couple of good carpenters. The rest of the construction is largely simple hammer-and-saw carpentry you can do yourself . . . and like it.

It wouldn't cost much, and there's a world of satisfaction in having your own "country estate." Write the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, 1337 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C., for details, referring to Design J11.

state the exact amount of residual shrinkage to expect. If the per cent is higher than three, think twice before you buy. Three per cent means more than an inch of shrinkage for each yard. If the fabric is not labeled with facts about shrinkage, it is usually wise to assume that the cloth will shrink. Use of the newer and excellent labels, giving shrinkage in exact terms, is spreading rapidly.

Broadcloth is another puzzler in textile terms. Some cotton broadcloth is a fine cloth, especially good for men's shirts. Other cotton broadcloth is poor. The "ply" of the yarn, that is the number of single strands twisted together to form the yarn for weaving, tells much about the quality. "Two-by-two," two ply in both warp and filling is good. In such broadcloth, the yarn count is about 146 by 72 and the material is strong. "Two-by-one," broadcloth, in which only the warp is ply, is usually coarser and the yarn count usually lower, often about 112 by 58. Some goods of a much lower yarn count is sold as broadcloth, but the quality is very low.

"Lisle" will be heard more frequently if cotton stockings are generally accepted with a war cut in the quantity of silk hose. "Lisle" originally was a fine hard linen thread made in France. Now it means a smooth cotton yarn made of high grade long staple cotton, tightly twisted and treated to remove the fuzzy fibers seen on many other cottons. Lisle is also "mercerized," which means that it is chemically treated, as many cotton yarns and fabrics are, for more gloss, to be smoother, stronger, and to take the dye better. Lisle stockings, by comparison with other cotton ones, cost more but are more attractive and better wearing.

Cooking With Your Refrigerator

By Katharine Fisher

Director, Good Housekeeping Institute

You'll find hot-weather meal preparation lots easier if you will make your refrigerator an active partner of your range. Don't limit your refrigerator to the storing of foods until you are ready to prepare and cook them. Use your refrigerator, also, to store prepared dishes, ready to pop into your oven, or even ready to serve. By using your refrigerator in this way, many a preparation job can be done in the cool of the morning, or even the night before, helping you keep out of the hot kitchen for longer stretches at a time. Here are two menus that carry out this idea.

All recipes tested by Good Housekeeping Institute. Use Institute-approved measuring cups and spoons. Measure level.

Sunday-Dinner Menu

- Jellied Consommé
- Baked Stuffed Fish
- Asparagus with Hollandaise Sauce
- Crisp Rolls
- Packaged Coffee Ice Cream
- Raspberry Ice

KATHARINE FISHER
Director of
Good Housekeeping
Institute

This entire dinner can be prepared on Saturday. The consommé is chilled in the can; the stuffed fish is wrapped and put into the evaporator tray; the asparagus comes from the vegetable drawer; the sauce is stored in a jar; and the ice cream is kept in the freezing compartment at proper setting.

Baked Stuffed Fish

- 22-lb. fish, cleaned and trimmed but not split
  - 4 tbsp. salt
  - 4 tbsp. melted fat or salad oil
  - 8 strips of bacon or fat salt pork
- Let fish stand for 5 min. in water and salt, which have been mixed together. Drain. Cut three or four gashes through the skin on each side of the fish. Stuff the fish, using following recipe; close opening with toothpicks and string, or with needle and thread. Break the skin thoroughly with melted fat or salad oil. Lay four strips of bacon in a shallow, greased baking pan 14" x 10" x 2 1/2", and place the fish on the bacon. Lay 2 more strips on top of each fish. Bake in hot oven of 300° F. for 10 min. Reduce the heat to moderately hot oven of 400° F. and bake 10 to 15 min. longer, or until fish is easily pierced with a fork. Lift fish carefully from pan onto a heated platter. Remove thread or toothpicks, garnish with slices of lemon, or tomatoes, or canned cranberry sauce. Serve 6.

Stuffing For Baked Fish

- 3 tbsp. finely chopped onion
- 6 tbsp. butter or margarine
- 1 qt. day-old bread cubes
- 1 tsp. crushed sage leaves
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/4 tsp. black pepper
- 1 c. diced cucumbers
- 4 tbsp. water

Cook chopped onion slowly in butter until transparent. Mix bread cubes, sage, salt, and pepper together; add cucumbers, water, onions, and butter; mix thoroughly with a fork. Cover and let stand for 5 to 10 min. Will stuff 2 1/2-lb. fish.

Help's-Day-Off Menu

- Sizzling Platter of Chopped-Meat Patties
- Sautéed Onions
- Hashed-Brown Potatoes
- Grapefruit Sections on Crisp Romaine
- Strawberry Chiffon Pie

All the dishes in this menu can be prepared early Thursday morning. The meat patties are stored in the meat keeper, and the onions, potatoes, and grapefruit sections are stored in covered bowls or refrigerator dishes. The pie does not need to be covered, because it is stored merely for chilling.

Strawberry Chiffon Pie

- 1 baked 9" pie shell
- 1 envelope plain, unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 c. cold water
- 4 eggs, separated
- 1/2 c. granulated sugar
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 c. crushed strawberries
- 2 or 3 drops red coloring
- 1/2 pt. heavy cream
- 3 tbsp. granulated sugar

Soak gelatin in cold water about 5 min. Beat egg yolks slightly, and add 1/2 c. sugar, lemon juice, and salt. Cook over boiling water until of custard consistency. Add the softened gelatin, stirring thoroughly; then add strawberries and coloring. Cool, and when mixture begins to congeal, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites, to which has been added remaining 1/2 c. sugar. Fill baked pie shell, and chill. Just before serving, spread the pie with the cream, whipped and sweetened with the 3 tbsp. sugar. Garnish with strawberries if you wish.

Raspberry Sherbet

- 1 cup sugar
- 1 quart raspberries
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 egg white

Add sugar to the raspberries, and let stand in refrigerator for two hours. If the mixture does not seem sweet enough, more sugar may be added. Add lemon juice and beaten egg white and freeze. Serve in glasses garnished with whipped cream.

Civilian Use of Rubber May Be Curtailed

"The prospect that civilian use of rubber may be curtailed because of mounting requirements for the vital material, emphasizes the importance to America's motorists of top quality tires and other rubber products," Floyd Camp, manager for Paul C. Voltz, declared today.

"While no one in America can predict the course of future events and their effect on our nation's rubber supply, the fact that 97% of the rubber we use comes from the Far East, halfway around the world, is a matter of grave concern," Mr. Camp said.

"Because of the uncertainties concerning our rubber supply, motorists should obtain the highest quality tires possible, for if curtailment programs are in effect, tires may be difficult to obtain," he added.

He pointed out that while rubber is more valuable to America today than ever before because of its vital applications in national defense, we are consuming it at the greatest rate in history.

"As of May 1st our nation's rubber supply, including manufacturers' and dealers' stocks and government reserves, as well as the tonnage afloat on the high seas bound for our shores, amounted to little more than seven months' requirements at the current rate of consumption," the store manager asserted.

According to Mr. Camp, approximately 70 per cent of the rubber consumed in America is used in the manufacture of tires and tubes for automobiles, trucks and buses. Tires and tubes also represent one of the major national defense uses of rubber to equip military trucks, combat units and scout cars.

Army Men Say

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.

Soups Make Meals

Not only does soup start the meal—it may well make it, too. Joined up with a salad or sandwiches or both, it's the perfect answer to the question of what to serve for supper on balmy spring days when you want to be out of doors gardening or just enjoying the sunshine and breezes.

Prepared home-style soups which only have to be heated before serving are made by expert chefs who know the art of delicious seasoning and perfect brewing, and it's grand to be able to depend on them for the main part of a meal. The cream soups and chowder-type soups are the best for this purpose because they are the more substantial kinds.

Below are some menus which include soup as an important item. Use them for both luncheons and suppers and for summer dinners.

Prepared home-style cream of tomato soup, tuna salad, hot biscuits, jelly. Fresh pineapple wedges for dessert.

Prepared home-style cream of mushroom soup, chopped vegetable salad, corned beef sandwiches, Apple pie for dessert.

Prepared home-style split pea soup with vegetables and ham, egg salad sandwiches, fresh cucumber pickle and radishes. Canned peach halves for dessert.

Prepared home-style vegetable soup, tuna-apple sandwiches, dill pickles, celery curls. Fruit cup and cookies for dessert.

Prepared home-style cream of green pea soup, cheese sandwiches on toast, cabbage and crushed pineapple salad. Chocolate cake for dessert.

Bean Casserole

If you want a main dish casserole that has lots of flavor and pleases the inner man, baked kidney bean casserole is just right. The oven-baked red kidney beans in the recipe have a meaty but substantial texture about them which sets off the spicy piquancy provided by the mustard, tomato ketchup and vinegar. If ever your husband gives a stag supper, this is just the dish to be served.

Baked Kidney Bean Casserole

- Combine—
- 2 medium (17 1/2-oz.) cans oven-baked red kidney beans
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon prepared yellow mustard
- 1/2 cup tomato ketchup

- 2 tablespoons pure cider vinegar
- 1/4 cup brown sugar.
- Place in baking casserole.
- Arrange over top—
- 3 strips bacon, cut in halves.
- Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.) 40 minutes. Serve hot. Serves 6 or 8.

1941 Deviled Eggs

Here's a new touch to give your deviled eggs when preparing them for this season's picnics—let the tasty crispness of fresh cucumber pickle come between the egg halves to give them extra color and flavor appeal.

Deviled Eggs with Fresh Cucumber Pickle

- Prepare—
- 6 hard cooked eggs.
- Shell and cool. Cut in halves crosswise. Remove yolks and mash very fine.

- Blend with—
- 2 tablespoons sandwich spread
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 1/2 teaspoon salt.
- Refill whites with this mixture. Put halves together, placing in center of each—
- 1 slice fresh cucumber pickle.
- Fasten with toothpick to serve. Serves 6.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

The story of "Cheers For Miss Bishop" is set in a midwestern university which opened its doors of learning before the turn of the century. Against this background, the lives and loves, the dramas and romances, the highlights and humors of the chief characters are vividly drawn and interrelated.

The heroine of the story, played by Martha Scott, is Ella Bishop and it is through her many dramatic and romantic experiences that the story unfolds with mounting excitement and suspense.

GRAND THEATRE

Merle Oberon and Melvyn Douglas are co-starred as the blissfully happy couple who discover they have no right to be happy in Ernst Lubitsch's light-hearted comedy, "That Uncertain Feeling," which is presented by Sol Lesser at a gala premiere at the Grand Theatre.

"That Uncertain Feeling" is Mr. Lubitsch's first production as an independent producer and it is also his first in years of Hollywood picture-making in which he focuses on the American scene. As a matter of fact, "That Uncertain Feeling" is as American as the alarm clock seen in one of the sequences and as modern as the psychoanalyst who almost succeeds in breaking up a perfectly delightful marriage.

RITZ THEATRE

Irving Stone's penetrating novel, "False Witness," has been deftly brought to the screen in "Arkansas Judge," which bowed into the Ritz Theatre yesterday with the Weaver Brothers and Elvira, in the leading roles.

He wants to be an adventurer, a hero, a business genius, a lover, but Eddie Albert is only "The Great Mr. Nobody" in the gay comedy-romance which opened at the Ritz Theatre last night to great reception.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley, Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church)

Almighty God, give us grace that we may cast away the works of darkness, and put on the armour of light, now in the time of this mortal life, in which Thy Son Jesus Christ came to visit us in great humility; that in the last day, when He shall come again in His glorious majesty to judge both the quick and the dead, we may rise to the life immortal; through Him Who liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Spirit, now and forever more. Amen.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Bell, Pond street, spent Sunday in Wildwood, N. J. The Misses Eva and Angelina Farrugio, Mansion street; Fanny Martini, Beaver street; Carolyn and Nicholas Marino, Dorrance street, spent Sunday in Atlantic City, N. J.

Miss Evelyn Force, Monroe street, and James Gamble, Croydon, enjoyed a day in Wildwood, N. J.

Mrs. A. Russell Burton, Radcliff street, returned home after a week in Atlantic City, N. J. Miss Estelle Burton, a student at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind.; and Miss Marion Burton, a student at Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., have returned home or their summer vacations.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Jackson and family, who have been residing with Mrs. Jackson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pearson, Wood street, have taken up their residence on Harrison street.

Mrs. Andrew Francescino, Cedar St., who was a patient in Abington Hospital, under observation for two weeks, returned to her home.

Mrs. P. McFadden is recuperating at the home of Mrs. Sadie McGinley.

Made From Left-Overs

The average woman can save hundreds, yes thousands of dollars in a lifetime, if she will promptly learn to save her left-over vegetables, meats and other foods as the base of "left-over" dishes for days ahead. Here are two recipes for those who appreciate the value of those "scraps" and for those who are willing to learn:

Ham Croquettes

2 cups mashed potatoes
1 tablespoon fat
3 egg yolks
Cayenne
1 cup cooked ham
Egg and crumbs
Mix potato, fat, yolks of two eggs and cayenne, beat until smooth, then set to cool. Chop the ham, mix with the other yolk, cook until the mixture thickens, and turn out to cool. When thoroughly cool, take a tablespoon of the potato mixture, make a hole in it put a large teaspoon of the chopped ham inside, close the hole and form a ball. Dip into flour, then into egg, roll in crumbs, and fry in a deep fat (375-390 degrees F.) from two to five minutes.

Salmon Mold, Piquante

1 tablespoon gelatin
3/4 cup cold water
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoons mustard
Dash cayenne
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
3/4 cup milk
1 1/2 tablespoons melted butter
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup flaked salmon
Lettuce

Soften gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Combine seasonings, egg yolks and milk in top of double boiler, and cook over hot water 6 to 8 minutes or until thickened, stirring constantly. Add butter, lemon juice and gelatin, stirring until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from fire and fold in salmon. Turn into fish mold; chill until firm. Unmold on bed of crisp lettuce and serve with cucumber cream dressing.

BRISTOL BOY NOW MANAGER OF FROOD TEAM AT SUDBURY

"Bill" Fine's Work On The Mound Gains Him A Promotion

BATTED .392 LAST YEAR

First Game Fine Managed, The Team Won by Score of 10 to 1

Because of his mound performance and batting, "Bill" Fine, former local boy, has been made manager of the Frood team of the Nickel Belt League at Sudbury, Ontario. Fine, last season, turned in the most brilliant victories and when not hurling played the outfield. His batting average for the season was .392.

In the first game under his direction, the Frood team won 10-1 with Fine getting two hits in four trips to the plate, driving in a pair of runs and making three sparkling catches in the outfield. The opposing team was the Cooper Cliff nine.

Coniston beat Fine's team in the second game by the count of 9-3 and again Fine played the outfield. In the third tilt of the season, "Bill" went on the mound and pitched his club to a 4-3 victory over Coniston. He struck out seven batters and issued but one pass. In three appearances at the plate, he lined out two safeties.

Fine has been playing ball in Canada for quite a number of seasons, having formerly hurled in the Bristol Twilight League and at one time having a try-out with the Phillies in the National League. He also did some pitching for teams in Trenton and Philadelphia.

"Bill" is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Fine, 255 Wood street.

SCHEDULE FOUR GAMES TO BE PLAYED TONIGHT

In an effort to complete the first half schedule by Tuesday night, President Paul Voltz, of the Bristol Suburban League, has re-arranged the remaining scheduled games. Rain, the past week, has played havoc with the schedule and piled up postponed games.

Four games are scheduled to be played this evening. St. Ann's and Fleetwings clash on Landreth's field. Badenhansen meets the Odd Fellows on St. Ann's field; Edgely and Rohm & Haas battle it out for first place on the Maple Beach diamond and Voltz-Texaco meets the Auto Boys on Leedom's field.

The schedule also calls for a pair of games to be played tomorrow night, with Rohm and Haas meeting St. Ann's on the Saints' field and Edgely playing Voltz-Texaco at Landreth's.

For Monday evening, three tilts have been booked. Fleetwings meets Voltz at Landreth's; Rohm and Haas plays Badenhansen at Turner's; and the Odd Fellows line-up against the Auto Boys on Leedom's field.

On the closing evening of the first half schedule, Diamond plays Badenhansen at Turner's and Fleetwings meets Edgely at Edgely.

Quite a bit hinges on the outcome of the Rohm and Haas-Edgely game scheduled for this evening at Maple Beach. These two clubs are deadlocked for first place and a defeat will place the loser in second place, deadlocked with Diamond and if St. Ann's wins, there will be a triple deadlock or second place with the three teams but one-half game away from the leaders.

All games are scheduled to begin promptly at 6:30 o'clock sharp.

orders and advised Yugoslavian Minister Constantin Fotitch in Washington, who, in turn, notified the State Department.

U. S. Coast Guardsmen were immediately ordered to board the Yugoslavian vessels in a precautionary measure, but they were quickly withdrawn when it became apparent the Yugoslavian captains could be trusted. In view of the good faith of the Greek captain, the American Government likewise considered it unnecessary to take any precautionary measures concerning the Greek ships now in American ports.

The number of Greek vessels affected by Borchers' orders is withheld in deference to the Government's ban on the publication of any information concerning the movement of ships carrying American supplies to Britain.

Decries Communistic Influences in Labor

Harrisburg, June 19—U. S. Sen. Davis, of Pennsylvania, attacking the recent West Coast airplane strike as the "age long dream of Nihilist, Communist and Fascist come true," today decied against Communistic influences in the ranks of organized labor.

Davis spoke before the Second Division Railway Mail Association, assembled in second annual convention in Harrisburg.

Conn's Mother Proud of Him

Pittsburgh, June 19—"I am very proud of him." These simple words, from the lips of Billy Conn's sick mother, reflected the sentiment of Pittsburgh fans today.

On street corners, in restaurants and bars and in private residences, Conn's home-town followers repeated over and over—"Boy, that kid sure can fight."

They were uneasy and hopeful during the early rounds last night, then as Conn began hitting his stride and pounding the heavyweight titlist, they almost went berserk. They were stunned by the sudden knock-out delivered by Louis in the 13th round, but mighty proud of the Pittsburgh boy's showing against his heavier opponent.

Payment To Warrington District

Harrisburg, June 19—Auditor General Ross today authorized payments totaling $26,842 to 26 school districts in 24 counties. Payments include—Children placed by court, Bucks, Warrington Township, $813.37.

Threatened Rise in Ice Cream Prices

Harrisburg, June 19—An increase in the price of ice cream was threatened by dealers today if the State Milk Control Commission orders a price rise to farmers for milk used in that product.

Consider Oil Transportation Problems

Washington, June 19—With the East facing possible "gasolineless Sundays," representatives of the nation's petroleum industry gathered in Washington today to work out production and transportation problems to alleviate the threatening gasoline and oil shortage along the Atlantic seaboard.

Summoned to Washington by Petroleum Coordinator Ickes, several hundred officers of producing, refining and transportation companies will be asked to put aside profit considerations and work out some means of moving greater amounts of petroleum and products to eastern consumer markets.

Industry representatives have asserted that the threatened shortage is due to a lack of transportation facilities brought about directly from government action in conscripting 50 American oil tankers for the Aid-to-Britain program.

Another factor in the shortage situation is the rising demand for gasoline and oil, both for defense purposes, and as a result of a boom arising from increased jobs.

50 Japanese Warships Sighted Off Amoy

London, June 19—Passengers arriving at Singapore aboard the liner President Coolidge reported sighting more than 50 Japanese warships off Amoy, moving southwards, Reuters reported today.

Reduction in Workers Not To Affect Defense

Harrisburg, June 19—The proposed reduction of 25,000 workers from Pennsylvania WPA rolls because of the appropriation slash pending before Congress will in no way affect defense projects, State WPA Administrator Mathews announced today.

Sensational Message From Finland

London, June 19—Radio listeners in London heard a swirl of Russo-German war reports today but no broad-cast was more sensational than one which started in Helsinki, Finland, and in Minneapolis, Minn.

apparently resulted in a studio brawl. Just before the sounds of angry voices and a scuffle came over the air, the Helsinki announcer declared: "The day of liberation is at hand."

HULMEVILLE

A number of prizes have been gathered for those scoring high at the card party to be conducted in William Penn Fire Co. station by the Auxiliary tomorrow evening. Among them are: metal kitchen stool, canister set, household linens, woman's slip, smoking set, lamp shade, groceries, lawn rake, etc.

Cars will leave Neshaminy Methodist Church on Saturday evening at 5:15, to take those having reservations to the Wesley Club dinner at Scudders, Falls, N. J.

ARRESTS "EASTER RABBIT"

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—(INS)—Police officer L. M. Cline, who loves children, indignantly denies that he is interfering with one of childhood's happiest experiences just because he arrested an "Easter rabbit." The prisoner was carrying a basket of Easter Eggs and told the officer he was just a little Easter rabbit, celebrating Easter early. He was booked for drunkenness.

HARD TO UNDERSTAND

CAMP CLAIBORNE, La.—(INS)—Private Gerhard Mokros, who was born in Prussia, and now is a trainee with Company B, 164th Infantry, from Fargo, N. D., is still pretty hard to understand because of his accent. That, however, probably explains his civilian occupation. He was a train announcer which started in Helsinki, Finland, and in Minneapolis, Minn.

The Great Game of Politics

$285,000,000, which would be the minimum cost.

IN his recent message Mr. Roosevelt presented the following reasons for building the seaway: (1) It would make available 21,200,000 horsepower of low cost electric power for the joint defense of North America; (2) both countries need electric power and both face power shortages because of defense demands; (3) it would relieve the load on the railroads and help prevent a transportation bottleneck; (4) it would increase our capacity to build ships and provide a great highway from an important defense-production area.

THE chief reasons for opposition are these: (1) The project is of exceedingly dubious merit, even when completed, both commercially and for defense purposes; (2) it could not possibly be put into operation under four years (which is Mr. Roosevelt's estimate), and it might easily be six years; (3) that to start construction now would be to divert a vast army of workmen badly needed in defense plants, thus critically increasing an already existing labor shortage; (4) the money, the time and the labor involved in the building of this seaway would produce definitely greater results for defense if expended in other more practical ways.

TO the average mind it would seem that though the favoring reasons were undisputed—and none of them are—they are all far outweighed by the two great arguments on the other side: First, and this is conceded, that the canal could not be completed within four years; second, and this is not denied but just ignored, that it would interfere with and slow down the defense program by diverting from it labor, machinery and supplies. Yet, in the face of these facts, Mr. Roosevelt persists in urging the project as a defense measure.

IT is fair to state that no one else has ever done so. It is also fair to state that if he were to withdraw his support the project would hardly have a sponsor in Congress or out. More than with any other measure submitted to Congress in a long time, this has become personal with the President. Those who have talked with him say that he will feel a greater personal elation if the resolution goes through and a deeper personal disappointment if it doesn't go through than about any other pending proposal.

THE extent to which he is making this a personal matter is evinced by the recent statements in its favor made by the two heads of the OPM, Mr. William Knudsen and Mr. Sidney Hillman. That their statements were inspired by the President was so obvious that before anyone could make the charge two Administration spokesmen rushed into print to deny it. Simultaneously they revealed the fact that very shortly Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox would make similar statements supporting the President's views. And certainly, they declared, no one would think that either of these officials was influenced to do so by Mr. Roosevelt.

IT may be cynical, but that is exactly what most people who think at all are sure to think—and with very good reason. Mr. Knox and Mr. Stimson are in Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet. To differ with him on a matter which he considers so vital as this would be equivalent to resigning. To refuse him support in so personal a fight is not done by Cabinet members. As to Mr. Knudsen, the big automobile man, and Mr. Hillman, the genial labor leader, it strains credulity to the breaking point to believe that in this matter they would have either views or interest if they hadn't talked to "The Boss" or been talked to by him.

MARK LIGHT PUTS NAME ON ENTRY LIST, LANGHORNE RACES

Won Feature Event Last Sunday In Races At Williams Grove

MANY TO COMPETE

Starting Field Increased From Eighteen to Twenty-Two Contestants

Mark Light, the AAA Eastern States Championship headliner from Lebanon, came in today as an added entry for the 100 mile Langhorne title classic Sunday afternoon.

Light won the feature event and the top share of honors last Sunday at Williams Grove.

Officials of the American Automobile Association Contest Board looked forward to a record list of entries as a result of postponement of the important 100 mile Langhorne championship classic from last Sunday because of the downpour of rain.

As soon as the AAA reopened entries, an avalanche of telegrams and letters were filed in speedway headquarters office, 260 North Broad street, Philadelphia, from drivers who had been signed up at other tracks last Sunday.

Light will drive the same fast Miller Special with which he has already set a terrific pace at Langhorne this year.

Because of the many entries being received, AAA officials ordered the starting field increased to 22 from the 18 originally assigned for the race which was halted by rain in the fourteenth mile.

The drivers who were well on their way to an all time speed record for the 100 miles at Langhorne have agreed to begin from the first mile and run the entire 100 miles. Starting positions will be determined by times attained in qualifying trials which start at 12 noon. The 100 mile classic will begin at two p. m.

Rain checks held by the record crowd of 45,609 fans last Sunday will be honored this Sunday, Lucky Teter said. Additional seats are being provided and reservations are being taken at speedway headquarters in Philadelphia. Ticket sales will continue until noon race day.

JOE LOUIS COMES NEAR LOSING CROWN

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, June 19—Joe Louis still holds the world heavyweight crown but it is just a trifle off balance.

For 12 full rounds, Billy Conn, the "fresh kid" from Pittsburgh who

AFTER TRIPLE

By

40-YEAR-OLD
CRAIG WOOD
WINNER OF THE MASTERS' AND NATIONAL OPEN GOLF TOURNAMENTS, TRYING FOR A "TRIPLE" IN THE P.G.A. AT DENVER IN JULY.

UNTIL RECENTLY WOOD WAS A PERPETUAL RUNNER-UP IN MAJOR TOURNAMENTS, ALWAYS COMING CLOSE BUT NEVER ABLE TO REACH THE TOP PRIZE.

THERE'S ALWAYS A FIRST!
NO ONE HAS EVER WON THE MASTERS, U.S. OPEN AND P.G.A. IN THE SAME YEAR.

THE RECENT OPEN WAS HIS 16TH APPEARANCE IN THE NATIONAL EVENT AND HE SET A RECORD BY BEING THE OLDEST AMERICAN EVER TO WIN IT.

wasn't supposed to have a "prayer," the good little man who was laughed at as a challenger, gave the Brown Bomber more than he sent. Then Joe found the range and with a fearful bombardment that lasted less than a minute and a half, he chopped Conn down in the 13th.

The curly-haired Irish kid was literally beaten to the floor, and, helpless, remained there as Referee Eddie Joseph counted him out. He made an effort to get up at "10," but he couldn't make it.

Thus, Louis stretched his all-time record run as "king of the ring" to 18 straight defenses, but, as the fight ended, a roaring crowd that jammed this big National League ball park wondered if two seconds might not have meant the difference between the old boss or a cry for "the king is dead, long live the king."

For, Billy was counted out at 2:58 of the 13th after the most rousing heavyweight title fight since Tony Galento and the Bomber put on their old-fashioned slugfest two years ago. And, had he been able to make those two seconds to the 14th, he might have stayed out of harm's way for two more rounds, to win on a decision. For the 12 completed rounds, he was master. On a score card he led eight rounds to four at that point, making it an absolute "must" for Joe to put the crusher on to keep his crown.

But win or lose for Conn, brother, this was a scrap. Joe started out just as he had indicated in his training camp. He had Billy boy hanging on by the end of the second. Then something happened. Mostly, it was Billy's "Irish" coming out. Through the third and fourth he started to tag Joe, with no more concern for the destroyer's dynamite than if Louis' hands were feather dusters.

Starting with the sixth and going right on through the 12th, with the possible exception of the 10th, when Joe opened up, Billy banged away at the head man as though he held a lease on him. He waded in, particularly in the eighth and ninth, and Joe must have got the idea there was a whole machine gun company in the ring with him.

• If you're looking for the car that will stand up best under punishment... look at the big 1941 Ford, and look at facts! In the year's most gruelling race—the famous Argentine classic—only 34 of the original 98 competitors were able to finish... but 9 of the 34 were Ford cars! Moreover Ford made a clean sweep of the first five places... plus the seventh, ninth, tenth and fifteenth places! Outstanding testimony that when you buy a big '41 Ford you buy a car built to "take it"! A car built on the new, Ford super-rigid X-Braced Frame! A car with the new, rigid one-piece-welded construction of top, side and floor! And you get the roomiest, easiest-riding car in its class!
